Compounding is the traditional method of preparing customised medications to meet unique physician and patient needs. When your healthcare professional is having difficulty finding the optimal dosage form, strength, or taste, the pharmacist will be able to research the problem and develop a product for the patient. These customised medications have applications in many different areas, including the following:

- Bio-identical hormone replacement therapy (BHRT)
- Dermatology and Cosmeceuticals
- Sports Medicine
- Pain Management
- Paediatrics
- Dentistry
- Podiatry
- Others

Payneham Road Chemplus Compounding Pharmacy specialises in the areas of Diabetes Care and Smoking Cessation. Lewis has had to undertake extensive education in the Diabetes and Smoking Cessation fields to ensure he can offer his customers high standards of care and information on these two important health issues. He offers advice on Diabetes and Smoking Cessation management and how you can make the most of the products and services available.

All of his staff have been properly trained to instruct people on how to correctly use the available range of blood glucose meters. "A section of the pharmacy is set up to display information, and show devices, helpful in the treatment of diabetes. Should customers have any additional questions on diabetes, I'm always more than happy to answer them personally" says Lewis.
